Pulp, Blue Girls

The blue girls that bake in the sun / Skin falls in flakes from each one Like leaves from autumn trees / they float upon the breeze These girls you have loved / are slowly decaying Ah / Drying out in the sun / before your eyes Wild stares in your face / they seem to accuse you Oh / What have you done / to earn this prize? The flesh underneath candy-pink Quite a strange affair you might think / They gasp and moan for air Beached fish on your lawn-chair These girls you have loved / are slowly decaying Ah / Drying out in the sun / before your eyes Wild stares in your face / they seem to accuse you Oh / What have you done / to earn this prize? Fragments left at the end of the day A pile of blue that is soon swept away Goodbye, blue girls, goodbye / Would it be too much to crv? These girls you have loved / have slowly decayed Ah / They dried out in the sun / before your eyes Wild stares in your face / they seem to accuse you Oh / What did you do / to earn this prize?
