

Quidam, We Lost

together we were flying kites so close you were to me together we felt the same I read it in your face one day a kitten walked home with you black and sweet, I knew I'd never be alone again then with the sound of glass wall breaking it ran away right through the open door and it was your fault that day changed everything I was trying to forget the great disillusion you cut off the kite that flew so high you clipped my wings and shattered the image I had of my life alone and confused
so many thoughts ran through my head I knew my childhood was over I could not comprehend I was misled serenity of passing hours I didn't think that they would ever end I missed the signs you stood beside me for a moment your urge was stronger than the will to stay so you went away I don't want to feel ashamed you didn't make me proud
the great disillusion
maybe I didn't try enough to take the blame, to face it now I'll never know
so many thoughts ran through my head
I knew my childhood was over
I couldn't comprehend I was misled I was misled
