

Ray LaMontagne, Sarah

When we first met we were kids, we were wild, we were restless
And after a while, I grew coarse, I grew cold, I grew reckless I hold this memory, hold you so close to me, whispered were we always happy
Lately it feels like i'm asleep and I just can't wake up Pacing the floor, want to call, but I can't so I hang up Sharing a secret on the train with a lady who's crying has ruined her make up

Now I see just how young, how scared I was
Eyes closed tight, throwing punch after punch at the world
Sarah, is it ever gonna be the same
Sarah, is it ever gonna be the same

Said goodbye to all the places I used to go
Said goodbye to all the faces I used to know
Nothing lasts forever
I guess by now, I should know I should know

There ain't a thing I can say that will ever repair
And you, who had so much advice, and yet couldn't share Maybe someday, we will look back at this and we'll smile, but right now I can't bear

Now I see just how young, how scared I was
Eyes closed tight, throwing punch after punch at the world
Sarah, is it ever gonna be the same
Sarah, is it ever gonna be the same
