

Reality Check, The Way I Am

dimensions of intervention are needless so I think striving and thriving I see I'm driving to the brink avoiding annoying eternal complications destinations unimportant constantly distorting my relations from patience to thoughts of hating anyone in my mind I find it hard to believe you can relate to my kind and if I could I would pretend that I'm alright by myself
If you love me as I am I'll put my pride on the shelf if I can I'll pretend I'm alright all by myself I'd rather drown than take your hand it's the way I am skepticism leaves a wrinkle on my brow cynicism prevents my change with this suspicion I'm caught
