Ren, For Joe

Its hard to take off from the ground when your wings are cut
Your stomach burns when your drinking from an empty cup
You know the entire ocean came from my tear ducts
I see the world through Fibonacci sequences and double Dutch
I guess there's some that's born lucky and there's some that's not
I tried to cut away my bitterness hatchet job
I locked my troubles in a trunk inside a pick up truck
Then dumped the whole thing over the same bridge the one you jumped

I think about that sometimes, vividly
What it felt like to look down and see tranquility
One sudden movement in a world of possibility
Only one movement to expose our fragility
I fucking miss you and I miss myself
I miss thinking that were indestructible as hell
I miss chilling by the pier cave and kicking back
With Callum Hugo saga Justin Stevie and the fuckin lads
I miss missing that I numbed myself to close the gap
I never even call em up the distance is my plaster cast
The truth is that the day you jumped my childhood jumped too
But I still can't find the anger all I find is missing you

Man I miss you With all my rhymes

I picture running 5 minutes quicker I'm right on time
I picture pulling you back over the edge and then were crying
And holding you my brother and telling you that its fine
That's not the way that I worked
Cause I was late like a jerk
There's not a day I didn't find a way to break from the hurt
Your body missing so we never got to wave to the hearse
I hope your listening, I love you man, I miss you absurd
Fuck

Burn Burn Burn on Burn Burn Burn on

Another domino it falls Across the way another's born How you supposed to raise a child? And give it courage from a storm In a world that is confusing Contradictions pave our flaws Some will say 'we're only human' Others judge us for a flaws Some get born In sheets of satin Some get by in tattered clothes Some will die before they live That's just how the story goes But for those of us still with us Who reside inside our hearts Tell them proudly how you feel And for those of us who aren't

Freckled angels stand strong
Freckled angels live on
Freckled angels climb higher
Freckled angels still inspire
Freckled angels won't forget you
Teach me to live my life better
Thirteen years and still I miss you
Now my wings are missing feather
Otherwise id come and join you

But for now I'm here on earth Stuck inside this mortal body But for everything its worth Made me stronger, made me wiser, made me braver, made me true Made me face the world with courage And that's all because of you

Freckled angels laugh the hardest And their hearts they are the largest With their wings they fly the farthest So I know you're gonna be okay

Freckled angels live the longest And their minds they are the strongest Oh their friends they are the fondest So I know you're going to be okay
