

Rez Band, Footprints

Did I ever know you? - That's the saddest thing of all,
In my mind I'm holding you,
Been a long time since the fall,
I can't embrace a memory, I couldn't even say goodbye,
Only left me with one question, and that's: why?

There were footprints in the snow,
You'd come 'round late at night,
You knew the door was always open, but you never came inside,
Now I'm standing by a cold, grey stone, all alone like you,
Don't tell me love's a mystery,
I'm feeling so confused, so confused.

You told me 'bout a heart of stone, said you could throw it through these pains,
Hoping to be rescued, still a prisoner of your shame,
You said bleeding was so easy, but to ever take the blame was like swallowing hot coals and spitting
Tried to show my love for you - now its just too late?
Why did you...why did you have to make the last mistake?
The last mistake.
