

Rich Mullins, Reach Out And Love Again

"Took the risk to be open, gave everything I had Trusting words that were spoken, believing I'd always have Streams of love flowing through me, pouring through my life
But now I look and I find my well is dry

Lord, I've been broken, life has driven me to my knees
Here's my heart, won't You hold it, so at last my arms can be free
To reach out in love again, not have to pretend, not have to be afraid
To reach out and love again, and give my heart away

When love leaves you hurting, has left you used and torn
It takes more than courage to try and love once more
So I come empty handed with nothing left of me
And I find that I'm standing where I need to be

Lord, I've been broken, life has driven me to my knees
Here's my heart, won't You hold it, so at last my arms can be free
To reach out in love again, not have to pretend, not have to be afraid
To reach out and love again, and give my heart away

To reach out in love again, not have to pretend, not have to be afraid
To reach out and love again, and give my heart away

To reach out in love again, not have to defend the heart You've already saved
A love like the love You gave"
