

Rise Against, Black Masks and Gasoline simply because you can breathe, doesn't mean you're alive, or that you really live, this life here has taken its toll and she just doesn't know how much more she can give but here, at the top of the world, I raise my hands and I clench my fists, they stand before me below demanding the answers with flips of a switch I don't understand where you got this idea, so deeply engrained in your head that this world is something that you must impress, because I couldn't care less a need for revolution's rising, it comes to the surface, gasping for air, we're not putting up with this planet one more day much less one more year

I don't understand where you got this idea,
that this world is something that you must impress,
so here and now, in our rotting nation the blood, it pours, it's all on our hands now we live, in fear, of our own potential to win, to lose, it's all on our hands now I have an Amerikan Dream, but it involves black masks and gasoline, one day I'll turn these thoughts into screams, at a world turned its back down on me
I don't understand where you got this idea,
that this world is something that you must impress,
