

Robyn, Underneath The Heart

I look into your eyes to see a place, drifting like a satellite in space, longing for a touch from someone who feels too much, and yet hold up your walls before I've gotten close enough, but baby, and that crack of shining light keeps me coming back for more, to see I can see the glimmer when you open up the door ref: Underneath the heart, just before the lips, right behind the soul, underneath the heart.

need to show, the place we aim to start is right there, what the mind has yet to know, the dreams you can't believe and the love I where tears would only hurt the way it stands.

You live inside the castle made of sand, I want to knock it down, start to fresh on solid ground, still you hide behind the past like that's what life's all about, but baby words can not describe true love when true love is really real, and the only way you know is if you show me how you feel,

what the mind has yet to know, the dreams you can't believe and the love I ref: Underneath the heart, just before the lips, right behind the soul,
need to show, the place we aim to start is right there,
underneath the heart.
You could spend your whole life in fear of pain, but love is only as deep as the risk you take, as the risk you take.

ref: Underneath the heart, just before the lips, right behind the soul, what the mind has yet to know, the dreams you can't believe and the love I need to show, the place we aim to start is right there, underneath the heart.