

Ruarri Joseph, As Long As You Do Too

Where is it I run
When the stakes grow wild and fruitless
And history comes undone
And renders ties and memories rootless?
Whats a man to do
To accept his fate as humble?
The dreams all black and blue
From the hop and skip and stumble
If its dreams I seek and desire
Theres no room left to get any higher

For the world has swerved and lost track
Kicking stones at the weak that cant kick back
Where to go now?
Where to dance?
Ill stay right here
Ill take my chance
As long as you do too.

Tough as it may seem
I dare not look at whats beneath me
A pyramid unclean
A sorry state that makes me guilty

And my woes crack and dont hold steed
Theyre a minion watching the birth of greed
All the hooks and holes I try to face
Are the swallowed ground that we cant replace
Where to go now?
Where to dance?
Ill stay right here
Ill take my chance
As long as you do too.
As long as you do too.
