

Ryan Baxley, Being Here

I have played with too much fire
These flames have grown higher than I'm able to put down
I've completely lost control
Of this psychological mess that I'm in now

You may have said that you'd always be near
But I can't remember you ever being here

I don't know what else to do
I can't stop loving you
I'd still swear we're meant to be
You are always on my mind
I try so hard to find a way to bring you back to me

You may have said that you'd always be near
But I can't remember you ever being here

I saw it coming all along
There was nothing I could do
But cherish every moment spent
I knew would be the last with you
I knew that we were finally over
Now I could see it on your face
You knew exactly how to make me think we were okay

You may have said that you'd always be near
But I can't remember you ever being here
