Saafir, Light Sleeper

I know I'm an emotionally disturbed person

People think I'm talkin' to myself when I'm Rehearsin' on the rhyme. A mass productionist.

a mass production matador, pan it more to the left, there you go. Minimize the Synthe-sizer wiser when I wind up for The pitch, but I don't pitch a bitch 'cause

Sales get derailed and towed an abundance

Of cash. Damn, I let it go. He was my man.

I tried to trust him, but I busted him twice

In my trash can and I'm askin'. I don't need

Psychology to see, the dichotomy in me.

Knew something was fishy, but I'm better than

Wishy washy or topsy turvy. It kinda irked

Me that I caught him sleepin'

'cause I try

To be wide awake, but ye slows it down

So I can't dilate and show that I'm bigger

Than that. But I also have to consider The fact that opposed to him not being

The right peeper, I'm a light sleeper

So what does it mean when I reach maturity

And still see that I'm not the mayor of my Mayonnaise, the master of my milieu. At least I have a swing and a few things

On my mind, it's never a good nighty night

Just a rise 'n' shine. Why's the rhyme So important. Why do I have to be so Potent and blow the mic a flow without

Chokin' - I don't. I'm arrogant and outspoken

Mouth no token I'm just a roust about. I have a house and clout but I don't come tight

But it's routine since few fiend for true Hip-Hop. It's a trip when I drop my style and forget it and forget where I got it from and how I got 'em sprung 'cause I'm

Stuck on myself and I depend on my luck

And wealth for health matters so I don't

Explode with stress I'll serve you an elf Platter they'll tell me my shit is fatter Than the first but I'm a light sleepin' Rapper in a hearst

I don't wear sarongs in my songs.
I diss
The skirts in verses an I used to measure
My demeters with clever panometers but I bounced like a pogo and I'm solo with The hobos. A nocturnal colonel in a journal
I put fly kids' eyelids to rest a detour for Deep sleep when I freak beats I snap Like a defective contraceptive and my