

Sabrina Cuie, Body Language

A little smile is all you need.
To let him know that he may proceed
Or just a look, maybe a wink
Will tell him that you're open
You don't even have to say a word
To let her know that you're feeling her
A simple glance gives you the chance
To feel her out and see where things go
But be careful not to cross the line
Or you may receive the wrong sign
Don't mistake being polite as an invitation
If you want to get attention
You gotta do something to edge him on
Look in his eyes, he'll realize
There is a connection

Body language means more than noise
Even stronger than your own voice
If you do the right thing
Ninety-four percent of the moves you make
Is enough to communicate All the things you won't say

Ayyyyyyyy

You don't have to say a word
Just express yourself boy
Whoa

If his day is just a little rough
One little gesture will soft him up
A sweet caress across his chest
Will guarantee he'll calm down
And if she's just a little stressed out
Nothing has to come out your mouth
Massage her back, the simple act
Is the way you show you care
Expression comes in many forms
So if you wanna get her on
Use your body, mind, and soul To let her know

Body language means more than noise
Even stronger than your own voice
If you do the right thing
Ninety-four percent of the moves you make
Is enough to communicate All the things you won't say
