Saetia, The Sweetness And The Light

These dialogue stars dream of sundays in October... Perception keeps us whole, and it may just be time to look rather than merely see... These testaments to divine light, years of work glare back at us... Out from oil, out from marble, out from sound... And sublimity, seeking sanctuary in the written word... in the written word To make the inspiration--Visible. Audible. To create a world from dust That is what it means to be our own deities.
