

Sara Bareilles, One Sweet Love

Just about the time the shadows call,
I undress my mind and dare you to follow.
Paint a portrait of my mystery,
only close my eyes and you are here with me.
A nameless face to think I see to sit and watch the waves with me, til they're gone.
A heart I swear I'd recognize is made out of my own devices
...could I be wrong?

Time that I've taken, I pray it's not wasted.
Have I already tasted my piece of one sweet love?

Sleepless nights you creep inside of me,
paint your shadows on the breath that we share.
You take more than just my sanity
you take my reason not to care.
No ordinary wings I'll need
the sky itself will carry me back to you.

The things I dream that I can do,
I'd open up the moon for you
Just come down soon.

Time that I've taken..I pray it's not wasted.
Have I already tasted my piece of one sweet love.

Ready and waiting for a heart worth the breaking.
But I'd settle for an honest mistake in the name of one sweet love.

Weave your shadows in the breath that we share

Savor the sorrow to soften the pain,
sip on the southern rain, as I do,
I don't look, don't touch, don't do anything,
but hope that there is a you.

The earth that is the space between,
I'd banish it from under me, to get to you.
Your unexpected love provides my solitary suicide
oh I wish I knew

The time that I've taken,
I pray it's not wasted.
Have I already tasted my piece of one sweet love?
Ready and waiting for a heart worth the breaking..
But I'd settle for an honest mistake in the name of one sweet love.
