

Sarah Blasko, Beautiful Secrets

Beautiful secrets you guard them in your secret garden
You water and nurture them until they're bigger than life itself

But you can't always know what they will uncover on the news
And you can't be too sure that your secret life won't show through

Beautiful speeches the lines that are preached here are only half-truth
Delicious like murder, one step and you're further than you could admit

But you can't always know what they will uncover on the news
And you can't be too sure that your secret life won't show through