Sarah Brightman, The Secret Still Remains

There's a secret about your love That always keeps me thinking of How we ease each others' pain

Only when I feel you near You take away my deepest fear You put a spell on my heart But I am not calling for any redemption

And the secret still remains
And I want you not to reveal
How you make me feel
How I have been touched by your love

So you keep the key And I keep on playing my part Not knowing the game And the secret will remain

These thoughts they haunt me every night Visions covering my mind Cause I know you can't be far

Just the thought that you are mine Makes cold wind shiver down my spine You put a spell on my heart But I am not calling for any redemption

And the secret still remains And I want you not to reveal How you make me feel How I have been touched by your love

So you keep the key And I keep on playing my part Not knowing the game And the secret will remain

And the secret will remain And the secret will remain And the secret will remain