Savatage, Can you hear me now

If I closed my eyes Would it all subside To an echo in the night Of a distant fading light Then a strangers silhouette A burning cigarette And somewhere in the haze A passage through the maze And can you hear me now Or are there just too many doors Between then and now For me to ever reach on through And pull you back somehow But that cant happen anymore Still still in the night I think I hear you calling I have walked this stage As the music played They knew every word But they never heard For they never changed Its all very strange As Im standing here Contemplating years And can you hear me now Or are there just too many doors Between then and now For me to ever reach on through And pull you back somehow But that dont happen anymore Still in the dark Id swear I hear you calling