Saybia, Dressed In Black

dressed in black with a rose in my hand I now understand I kept you for as long as I could it's time to let go I stare into your watery eyes as you wander off into the light I watch though my eyelids were closed as my memory capture the sight I'm breathing though a part of me died it doesn't seem right I'm standing as life lingers on it's time to move on I stare into your watery eyes as you wander off into the light I watch though my eyelids were closed as my memory capture the sight I stare into your watery eyes as you wander off into the light I watch though my eyelids were closed as my memory capture the sight I stare into your watery eyes as you wander off into the light I watch though my eyelids were closed as my memory capture the sight one day with a rose in my hand I'll see you again see you again