Scanner, After The Storm

Can't you hear, can't you hear our moans, our crying? Dark is here, the mothers grieve, their babies dying Oh merciful Lord, forgive we kept our heads in the sand Not to blame, beyond is where we'll apprehend

Out in the war it's hand to keep the faith Knowing nobody's giving us true hopes

After the Storm we'd watch the new sunrise But the sun is obscured in sight doesn't heave After the Storm we'd wish him to arise Again dispel the dark clouds, forgive and let live

So many questions not any answers has been told Where should we go
How long we'll stay blind in this crystal world
Out in the war, how should we keep the faith
Knowing nothing gives us hope at all
And the blizzard going on... still...

After the Storm we'd watch the new sunrise But the sun is obscured in sight doesn't heave After the Storm we'd wish him to arise Again dispel the dark clouds, forgive and let live

"I know that nothing gives me a ray of hope But true is my regret - the tears under the iron vell..."

After the Storm we'd watch the new sunrise But the sun is obscured in sight doesn't heave After the Storm we'd wish him to arise Again the dispel the dark clouds, forgive and let live
