Senses Fail, Garden State

The Garden State has never looked so pitiful and grey As I awake to the garbage men today I hope they take all of my old mistakes 'Cause I can't seem to shake them on my own

My head, it spins when I look at the mirror And spit at the man I see with anchors for his eyes I built my castle top in the sky So when it rains they melt away with shame

Here I am, looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

All of my fears are getting checked by the medicine I take All of the Gods are scared theres rumors of the sins You will be a riot in my heart soon It wants to be beating for your (??)

Here I am, looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies

Here I am, looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

Here I am, looking down at the bottom of the glasses It's all my fault that I need a sign like shooting stars To help connect the dots and turn my cuts into scars

My regrets are what keep me still alive I need to make up for all the lies