Serena Ryder, Winter Waltz

Winter Waltz:

It was the first time they ever set eyes on each other and knew that they never would part

With four eyes wide open to heaven and hoping and dancing all night in the dark

with all the ground frozen they danced in the dark and melted the fields and a hole in the sky with the love they held in their hearts

they danced all night smiling no talking, just sighing and singing of sweet lonely nights

but now they're together for ever and ever not talking, just singing all night

With all the ground frozen they danced in the dark And melted the fields and a hole in the sky with the love they held in their hearts

Danced and danced and danced some more it was the sweet satisfaction and the cold they ignored until the sun started waking from a slumber so deep their feet and fingers numbing and their face white with sleet

they fell asleep dancing to the hole in the sky with four eyes wide open and no tears were cried

with all the ground frozen they danced in the dark and melted the fields and a hole in the sky with the love they held in their hearts

And melted the fields and a hole in the sky with the love they held in their hearts