

Sesame Street, Gone With The Wind

Monsterpiece Theatre overture, Cookie Monster seated in his chair wearing his lovely red smoking

Alistair Cookie: Good evening. Alistair Cookie here, again. Welcome to Monsterpiece Theatre. Ton

(We see a plantation-style house from the outside, the wind blowing through the trees. Next, we mo

Green (played by Kermit the Frog): Uh, that wind seems to be getting mighty strong, Miss Scarlet.

Scarlett: Oh, Green, what'll we do? What'll we do? What'll we do?!

Green: Frankly my dear, I haven't got the froggiest ... errr ... foggiest.

Scarlett: But that means ... that means, I'm going to have to figure something out.

Green: I reckon so, my dear.

Scarlett: Oh! This wind! It's too loud for me to even think! I know, I'll think about it tomorrow.

Green: I was afraid she was going to say that. Uhhh ... uhhh ... something tells me tomorrow will be

Scarlett: Wait, there is something we can do!

Green: What's that?

Scarlett: We can subtract!

Green: We can subtract?

Scarlett: Yes, subtract, like this. There's two of us, right?

Green: Yeah.

Scarlett: Two of us, take away one of us (Kermit's railing breaks and he flies offscreen, yelling as h

The chandelier with the pig sways by again as the scene changes back to Cookie Monster. The dra

Alistair Cookie: And so ends all-time favorite, "Gone With The Wind".

A lamb lands in his lap and he pulls him close, saying, "Awww." as he pats him.