

Seven Ender, She Remembers

She holds her head against the window
Her eyes roll across the dark, dark clouds
Sick and lonely sit a place next to her
While the best of life
Shoves her down

The walls are white and no one's home
And no one cares about
The water stains that have been left behind

Her hands are empty
And her rings still there
Waiting for the best time to Come around

And I
Don't even know
Don't even care for where she goes
And her ears still ring
From the last thing
That she can remember

She runs a stick into the ashes
Well nothing goes up but she stays down
She's sitting in the grass
She's waiting for the rain
Only hoping that her
Life will change

And I
Don't even know
Don't even care for where she goes
And her ears still ring
From the last thing
That she can remember

I said
Everyone
Everyone just keeps standing there
Everyone
You've gotta get on out of there
Everyone
Everyone just keeps standing there
Everyone again

On and on she said
There's no going back
Inside our heads
Oh on and on we ran
There's no going back
Inside my head

'Cause I
Don't even know
From the last thing
That she can remember

I said
Everyone
Everyone just keeps standing there
Everyone

Everyone
Everyone just keeps standing there

Everyone
Everyone

Everyone
Everyone just keeps standing there
