Shaaman, For Tomorrow

Long ago, the world was one
We walked through the ice floes
To an unenduring land
Our future, our hope
There was something in the air,
The Age of the Unknown
Far beyond the sea of trees
The vision laid close

There's a place where the sun shines brighter There's a mountain that climbs to the stars...

Day and night we built a reign With heavenly desire Sweat and dreams made up the bricks That raised up our walls

Paying tribute to the gods And blood kept on flowing And the lust for knowledge Was the sense of it all

Fly, fly to the stars, Reach them on high Bring back the answers of the night Roll with the clouds, Sing with the birds, 'Cos one day we'll have to say goodbye!

Here we go, carrying no longer sorrow Standing up in the wind Walk along, marching on for tomorrow In this neverending way

Many years of harmony
The message arrived soon
Three big stars lined up together
A chill in the air...

The high-priest was dressed in black On top of the stairways Longing for the sacrifice Of those who would dare

Fly, fly to the stars
Then let it fall
Into the emptiness of night
Our time has come
Time to move on
'Cos one day we have to say goodbye...

Here we go, carrying no longer sorrow Standing up in the wind Walk along, marching on for tomorrow In this neverending way

Come with me to Paradise Let's return again, Let's return again!

To be closer to the skies Living on a dream, Living on a dream... Here we go, carrying no longer sorrow Standing up in the wind Walk along, marching on for tomorrow In this neverending way
