Shades Apart, Second Chances

I will watch the sky- streetlights dimly lit from far away I recognize- her silhouette with someone else the temperature outside- thaws me and frees up the memory of everything so far behind

Second Chances - still waiting Second Chance is still waiting there for me

I count down the miles- headlights hypnotize from far away I realize- how she once believed in me I let it slip right by scared of facing insecurities I locked away so far inside

Second Chances - still waiting Second Chance is still waiting there for me

I have memorized- all the things she said and I rehearse it line by line- syllables of falling breath the static on the line loneliness as open as the air between the highway and the sky

Second Chances - still waiting Second Chance is still waiting there for me