Shaimus, Left To Dry

She was left alone to dry To contemplate the things that her other half denied And a wave of grief in sight Was cresting and the crash had drowned all her thoughts inside

She was left alone today To think about the things she had only yesterday She don't know how he got away All's fair in love and war but it's an ugly price to pay

She felt like she was left Like she was

Left to dry She was left alone to heal the wounds that hurt from deep inside She was left to dry She had something great She would have changed if she could make it right

She will sleep alone tonight And the torment of her mind will keep her up to analyze All the bait and all the brine Bitter is the taste there is no sweet to this goodbye

And like the splinters from a ship drying on the shoreline Part of something great but nothing by itself This love was broken taking part of her away with him Pieces lying in the sand and broken shells In the sand and broken shells

She felt like she was left Like she was

She was left to dry She was left alone to heal the wounds that hurt from deep inside She was left to dry She had something great She would have changed if she could make it right
