Shearwater, Palo Santo

The wind that lifts the leaves against the night The reeds that bow and bend beneath its weight The holy sap, its smoky light I will not hide

The fish that swim inside the murky deep The island shores that loom above the sea The holy, holy melody Will bring them all to me

And play again that melody Hidden close to me