Shelby Lynne, Black Light Blue

(written by Shelby Lynne and Bill Botrell)

Black light blue Heaven's perfect hue the ultimate possession the game you couldn't lose the voice in the corner the song you hardly knew the terrible admission some tragic lonely tune slow the Spanish dancer on a stage

Black light blue is tearing me in two a mad revelation Shakespeare isn't true the raising of the glasses the falling into sin dying in the desert the loners lonely end in the shifting sand oasis

Black light Blue cock-a-doodle-do calling for the innocent the taming of the shrew the muting of the colors the mystical review trying for forever, is what you'll never do there you stand, alone Black light blue