

Sherwood, A Different Light

And there's a feeling in the morning that I can get my stomach screams a warning
when my first thoughts are forming in my head
And I can stay between the covers
Remember how I loved another
Postponed my slow recovery, yeah.

But I can fall asleep tonight if I can make it home by the daylight.
But I recall the times I was left alone.
'Cause in the glimmer of your eye
I begin to see myself in a different light. Wo-oh-oh

And there's a feeling in the morning that I can get my stomach screams a warning
When my first thoughts are forming in my head, and they say
"woah-oh-oh-oh-oh, baby, I've gotta go, and I hate to let you know in this way."

But I can fall asleep tonight if I can make it home by the daylight.
But I recall the times I was left alone.
'Cause in the glimmer of your eye
I begin to see myself in a different light. Wo-oh-oh
A different light, a different light.
