

Siddharta, Marslander

Every morning there's a crow telling me the way to go different place I'm meant to be out in space infinity circling around the Sun on the planet yet to find

But there's a name down in everything I go where to hide again nobody wants to show and in a million years I couldn't let you fade but today I have to find another way

Different eyes I need to see my entire history need no air need no control from above or down below and considering my aim I'm the one you shouldn't blame

but today I have to find another way
