

Silent Majority, And They Loved It To Death

love can you taste the blood from my lips as it drips right down your chin you sucked my heart out right through my teeth and you pinned it right to your sleeve something's got to give particular aspects of where we live all you've got to give is time love you offered to take my friend for a ride wherever he wanted to go you run the bases run the red lights under these east end skies so much has been said when the time is right you jump from bed to bed and they loved it to death surrender yourself to the bright lights of night life head up to the north shore with Huntington girls bigger curls bigger guys nice try any time is the right time summer time summers have to end and here is just a helping hand to lend the lonely fall is just a day away so say what you can say love can you pull the plug on these lights I've seen all I can see you put the spotlight on my life and quickly you said good night burn those folded notes the smoke will clear your throat I hung on every note and stood by every word you spoke
