

Sister Machine Gun, Living Without You

When I'm lost and I'm lonely and I've got it bad
There's nothing that amounts to the things I've never had
Now you know just what I've been through
Living without you is something I could learn to do

Well I'm drunk and I'm tired of the life I lead
'Cause you never give me anything that I need
Now you know how much I hate you
Living without you is something I could learn to do

You see everything in black and white
Nothing's wrong when you're not right
Trusting you was a mistake
I don't know how much more I can take
When I'm finally broken, when I'm dead and gone
Then will I remember that you did me wrong
Everything I ever had was stolen by you
Living without you is something I could learn to do
When I'm lost and lonely and I've got it bad
There's nothing that amounts to the things I've never had
