Slim Whitman, China Doll

I'm tired of crying and all your lying, That's why I'm buying a china doll. Her eyes are bluer, her faults are fewer, Her lips are truer; my china doll.

I'd rather have a doll of clay That I could call my own, Than someone else just like you With a heart of stone.

She'll never leave me. She'll never grieve me, I'll never lose her -My china doll.

I'd rather have a doll of clay That I could call my own, Than someone else just like you With a heart of stone.

She'll never leave me. She'll never grieve me, I'll never lose her -My china doll.