Smalltown Poets, Anymore

covered it up with a question mark covered it with a crowd keeping myself among the proud i don't believe anyone could love anyone less if they tried i smiled at you and died inside, inside i heard the voice i knew covered it over with thoughts of you and i'll never keep it silent anymore, silent anymore, anymore silently think of a prayer for me voice it inside your head maybe i need to hear it said sometimes the word condemns the thought so they're held a lot silence is golden when i'm not, i'm not whether it's God or it's you i need to speak and be spoken to i can't stand this silence anymore, silence anymore, anymore i can't stand it anymore, silence anymore no not anymore, anymore
