

Smalltown Poets, There Is Only You

Growing more uneasy with every question asked

It seems you're jealous of my interests

And the graven things I've cast

Waking resolutions of twenty years or more

That I would disallow golden cows my favor anymore

Your wishes set in stone, I broke the first of ten

I've cleared this temple out come take your place again

There is only You

There is only You

Tiptoe from an awkward scene

Not fooling anyone

Am I dumb enough to kneel with my accusers

Or brave enough to run

Petty daggers bounce weakly off my back

I'm leaving breathless gods and secrets in my tracks

Your wishes set in stone, I broke the first of ten

I've cleared this temple out come take Your place again

There is only You

There is only You, believe me

There is only You

There is only You

To a thousand generations
Of the faithful man
You will show Your favor Lord

There is only You (Love earth can't replace)
There is only You, believe me (Heaven can't erase)
There is only You (Find me on my penitent face)
There is only You
