

Something Corporate, I Want To Save You

standing on the edge of morning scent of sex and new found glory playing as she's pulling back her hair she drives away
she's feeling worthless used again but nothing's different she'd stay the night
but knows he doesn't care home by three to deafening quiet the porch light's off guess they forgot it

she'd cry herself to sleep but she don't dare
and she wants to be a model she wants to hear she's beautiful she's beautiful

i want to save you
i want to save you
i need you
save me too
i want to save you

dressed by dawn and out the door no light
she memorized the floor so she could leave without being detected she works till three it's uniform
she dreams that he'll come by the store she prays for days when boys mean she's protected and she wants someone to see her she needs to hear she's beautiful
she's beautiful

i want to save you
i want to save you
i need you
save me too
i want to save you

and she won't sleep
she won't sleep
and she won't sleep
at all

i want to save you
i want to save you
i need you
save me too
(let me save you)
