

Sophie Zelmani, On Your Way

You never ask things you wonder

You just wait until you wonder no more

You're giving up so gently to get what your dreams are keeping you awake for

Who hears your heart talking only ears that can do you no harm

You only hear it if they listen

You've changed your love you've changed your life you've changed your ways and that has taken y

Your eyes are constantly broken but your hands overwhelm a thousandfold

So when are the things you're touching gonna be someone you can hold

No need for love and you need no one

You let them come so you can make them go

It must be something you believe in somewhere your way is leading to is leading to