

Star Salzman, Forever Until Tomorrow

Watch the sunrise in the west.
Watch the water spin the wrong way out the drain;
the wrong way, the wrong way, the wrong way.

You, you're walking backwards;
space and time have no meaning anymore.

You, you're moving backwards,
broken after washing up on the shore.

Then I awake,
at the end of time.
Time and space,
are friends of mine.
Someone let me out of here!

Watch the sunset in the east;
watch the future unwind and wind itself to sleep.
Turn yourself around
and come back the way you came.

Rewind, dniweR.
watch me turn around.
The Earth is spinning the wrong way
and the hourglass is working upside-down.

I hope you don't mind temporal anomalies.
The speed of light's a limit we can break now;
traveling without moving.

Watch the sunset in the east;
watch the future unwind and wind itself to sleep.
Turn yourself around
