

Stars, The Night Starts Here

the night starts here
the night starts here
forget your name
forget your fear
the night starts here
the night starts here
forget your name
forget your fear

the pleasure part
the after thought
the missing stone in the graveyard
the time we had
the task at hand
the love it takes to become a man the dust at dawn is rained upon attaches itself to everyone no one is spared
no one is clean
it travels places you've never been or seen before

the night starts here
the night starts here
forget your name
forget your fear
the night starts here
the night starts here
forget your name

you drop a coin into the sea and shout out, "please come back to me!"
you name your child after your fear and tell them, "i have brought you here"

the aftershock
the moment that it takes to fall apart
the time we had
the task at hand
the love it takes to destroy a man the ecstasy
the being free
that big black cloud over you and me and after that the upwards fall and were we angels after all?
I don't know
I don't know
