Stephen Duffy, She Wants To Share Her Magic

And so we're chastened

We feel so insecure

We're frightened

Now not sleeping around's

Enlightened

What did we do wrong?

While love bereaves me

I can't believe in me

Natalie it started

Only an hour ago

Lying on your carpet

I knew what I didn't know

I felt myself let go.

You know I see you

Blushing in the dark

Recalling all those requited moments

of longing

Can I accept each love

You've taken

The case continues

Down bourgeois avenues.

And you like a teenage Isabelle Huppert

Swapping foot noted thoughts

On what we share

On lying there

Last night the stardust

Settled in the cradled apartments

Across the evenings sweet indulgence

We satisfied ourselves.

The gears are changing

But we're going nowhere.

Natalie it started

Only an hour ago

Lying on your carpet

I knew what I didn't know.

Natalie it started

Only an hour ago

Lying on your carpet

I knew what I didn't know

I felt myself let go.