Submersed, You Run

Heavy thoughts seem to slip away When you were here on my darkest days I trust in you Many debts I cannot repay Too many clouds in my sky today I trust in you

As if it really matters You run

When I reach out for a hand to Pull me through the storm Pull me through the norm I reach for you

Broken glass as the evening fades Take another drink as the evening fades I trust in you Stealing rays from the sun so bright Join a million people in the church tonight I trust in you

As if it really matters You run

When I reach out for a hand to Pull me through the storm Pull me through the norm I reach for you

In my mind I reach for you

Spread inside My mind You'll find That you really matter What's right In this life We must try As if it really matters

I reach out for a hand to Pull me through the storm Pull me through the norm

I reach out for a hand to Pull me through the storm Pull me through the norm

When I reach, I reach, I reach When I reach, I reach, I reach I reach for you
