

Sunny Side Up, Never Cryin' When It Hurts

Trapped with a suitcase in a station fighting the windmills in your mind leaving a home and a trace of devastation looking for something you can't find You wrapped your goodbyes in a letter you never used too many words her heart will be broken but you don't mean to upset her you're never cryin' when it hurts Tossin' and turnin', the anger is burnin' inside you,
'till it guides you and divides you in any old way You don't get along and you feel that it's wrong to deceive them, so you leave them 'cos you're life is a hell when you're under their spell but you don't know which way to go The man in the grey suit blows his whistle his face is as pale as the white of his shirt you look through the window but you're vision is all blurred you're never cryin'
you're never cryin' when it hurts
you're never cryin' when it hurts
you're never cryin'
you're never cryin' when it hurts
you're never cryin'...
when it hurts