

Sunspot, Prozac Girl

Is she a victim of her own physiology,
or just a victim of some bad psychology,
all I do know is shes fifteen and shes on Prozac.

She sits in her room and cries all night,
never had a real boyfriend in her life.
Her mommy wonders why she doesnt have any friends,
Daddy only sees her when he has her on the weekends.

Is she a victim of her own physiology,
or just a victim of some bad psychology,
all I do know is shes fifteen and shes on Prozac.

And the doctor said, you better take your meds,
to fix whats wrong inside your mind.
Just a Prozac Girl in a Prozac world,
Shift the blame and everything will be just fine.

Her grandma thinks that it might be bad luck,
I think we used to call it just growing up,
when you feel that your life is just pathetic,
you slap it in a textbook, and blame it on genetics.

Is she a victim of her own physiology,
or just a victim of some bad psychology,
all I do know is shes fifteen and shes on Prozac.

And the doctor said, you better take your meds,
to fix whats wrong inside your mind.
Just a Prozac Girl in a Prozac world,
Shift the blame and everything will be just fine.

She doesnt cry anymore,
she doesnt laugh anymore,
she doesnt know how she should feel anymore.
A chemical imbalance,
thats covered by insurance,
its hard to be a little girl,
when youre numb to the world.

Is she a victim of her own physiology,
or just a victim of some bad psychology,
all I do know is shes fifteen and shes on Prozac.

And the doctor said, you better take your meds,
to fix whats wrong inside your mind.
Just a Prozac Girl in a Prozac world,
Shift the blame and everything will be just fine.
