

Susanna Hoffs, Eyes Of A Baby

It was five o'clock in a dying city
I was putting on makeup, trying to feel pretty
Looked around my tidy little home
Oh, I was tired of being alone
Had an eight o'clock date with a man I never met
I hate to be late, so I headed east on Sunset
Thinking anything is better than being alone

REPEAT:

Now I'm looking in the eyes of a baby
Now 'm looking in the eyes of a man
No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile?
Did you see him smile?

There was fog in the road
It was like I was driving blind
All the faces I've known
Kept running around in my mind
I was right to keep looking
I was right to look ahead
You never know what you might find
I was feeling so old and naive at the very same time
I had no idea if I could ever talk to a guy
If I could run, if I could leave, if I could hide
You know I would
But there he was and it was time

REPEAT

Now we're looking in the eyes of a baby
Now we're looking in the eyes of a child
No one ever could be more surprised than me
Did you see him smile?
Did you see him smile?
