

Susie Suh, Seasons Change

Seasons change

They change when you don't seem to notice

All of a sudden wind grows cold and then the snowflakes start to fall

It's kinda like when fell in love with you, I

I didn't even notice when you didn't love me anymore

There's a blue

There's a blue sky on my left and a pink sky on my right

And I'm driving down the 92 where the bridge looks like it touches the sky

And I'm

I'm thinking to myself where did all the time go

And why can't I remember what it was like when I was young

Seasons change (Change)

And you grow a little older

Nothing stays the same

The past becomes the future

Seasons change (Change)

And you grow a little older

No one stays the same and my heart grows a little colder

I'm standing in a parking lot of some suburban shopping mall

And I'm dressed in my work uniform

I'm making friends with all the vacant cars

And I'm

I'm thinking to myself

I gotta make a big decision today

And I hope I choose a better tomorrow rather than a better yesterday

Seasons change (Change)

And you grow a little older

Nothing stays the same

The past becomes the future

Seasons change (Change)

And you grow a little older

No one stays the same and my heart grows a little warmer

My heart turns a little warmer

Everything turns and turns

And turns

And turns

Seasons change (Change)

And you grow a little wiser

Nothing stays the same

The past becomes the future

Seasons change (Change)

Only the cherry blossoms

They bloom again

Ah

Oh

Only the cherry blossoms

They bloom again

Ah

Oh

They will bloom

They will bloom
