

Sylvan, In Vain

You smile, you charm, you hold his sense
Bewilder everything
So hard to see you can hardly keep back your tears
So innocent, you enchant the world
But dont care at all, seek something else
Youre blinding, youre hiding

If you held out your hand,
Would it be such a dangerous deed?
Would you loose your dream?
If you held out your hand,
You could hope that your princes waiting near Should he wait in vain?

You give, you play a twinkling star,
But never close enough
And when you shine
you hide how fragile you are
So differently repulsive force
Thats why you hesitate
But somehow more

Its silent all around, a shattered trace
The dim glow hesitates to light your face
Your ego smeared
All that remains this night
A shadow on your face
Should all this fade emptiness?
Oh no! Oh no!
Love should not be wasted in vain
