

Tammy Wynette, Where Could You Go (But To Her)

Why will a man go out and cheat what makes temptation so sweet
And it's a shame that neon lights will make a man lay out all night
With a girl in a bar down the street
You never meant to be that man but last night you held another's hand
Though her kisses tasted sweet that's not what made you cheat
So I'll try and explain it if I can
Where where where could you go oh when you needed love I wasn't there
And her two open arms offered love sweet and warm where could you go but to her
I'll forgive your one mistake if you swear it's the last you'll ever make
I let those arms you need the most take you back and hold you close
For loving you is a habit I can't break
Where where where could you go oh when you feel the urge to go wrong
The next time you're tempted when your glass is emptied
Where will you go you'll come home
