Tara MacLean, Evidence

Frightened of the shadow on the wall I think it looks a bit too much like me Search my life for evidence of truth Can you hear me Can you hear me now?

Terrified my tongue will now betray All the lies that I'd been taught to say Searched your eyes for evidence of love Can you hear me Can you hear me now?

Can you hear the child tears Whose paradise was taken from his hands Can you hold him in your arms And tell him that you'll try to understand When there's no way in hell you can Can you hear me Can you hear me now?

Afraid to break the silence in the room Disbelieving faces stare me down Seardch the world for evidence of faith Can you hear me Can you hear me now?

Can you hear the child tears Whose paradise was taken from his hands Can you hold him in your arms And tell him that you'll try to understand When there's no way in hell you can Can you hear me Can you hear me now?
