

Ten Hands, Bye-Bye

(Slavens)

I had a dream
a particular scene though now it gets hard to remember you looked so real as you sat at the wheel the air smelled of early December I heard the sound of your voice remember
Luanne
I heard the sound of your voice say to me...
bye-bye
hope you remember my name when I'm gone
bye-bye
don't really know if it meant anything but I feel like a better man today it sounded so true that I knew it was you though I can't recall what you were saying if I was there you didn't seem to care when you spoke you were looking right through me I left school and I guess things got cool between you and our person in common but he was there too he went through it with you who's to say which one came out better